

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON.
THURSDAY, January 21, 1892.
CROSBY & NOYES, Editors.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent circulation in Washington three times larger than that of any other paper in the city. As a local NEWS paper and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

Mr. Oates' bill to define and punish blackmail in the District of Columbia and other territory of the United States, if so worded as to strike only blackmailers, will not provide a punishment more severe than the offense deserves. To say that extortion of money or other benefits under fear of unpleasant notoriety shall go free or of the most infamous punishment is to license one of the most infamous practices. But if the terms of Mr. Oates' measure are reported correctly he enlarges the borders of blackmail and makes a misdemeanor of threatening or attempting to make any disclosure injurious to the character of any person, for the purpose not necessarily of obtaining money or other benefit, but merely for the purpose of ridicule or revenge. The present stringent law of the District provides ample punishment for actual blackmail, "for the purpose of ridicule or revenge," and it is absurd to create the new misdemeanor of threatening or attempting in the spirit of ridicule to make an injurious disclosure concerning another when an actual ridiculing publication would not be punishable, unless untrue.

Pennsylvania Speakers of the House of Representatives at Washington—there have been three of them—have filled important niches in the national history and the reception today of the old portraits of the living Taliaferro A. Grow and the dead Samuel J. Handall is therefore an event of interest to the entire country. The old keynote speaker contributed the first speaker, he also contributed the first and last speaker of Congress, coming the old Confederation Congress, where there was only one house, the style of which was the resounding but descriptive one of "The United States in Congress assembled"—a style that might well have been continued. Today the mind can conceive the historic mass brooding over the Capitol, the figure of the preacher-soldier, F. A. Muhlenberg, from the far past, peering over one shoulder as the more distinct figure of Samuel J. Handall looms from behind the other and the mighty leaders of old-time Pennsylvania, the Franklins, the Wilsons, the Morrisons, the Seargents, the Stevenses and others, people the background.

The decision of the coinage, weights and measures committee of the House to vote on a free coinage bill on the 10th of February would seem to settle all doubt, if any existed, as to the position of that committee on the subject. Of course there never was any uncertainty as to the individual opinions of the majority—it is known already that they favored free coinage as a theory. But it was assumed in some quarters that while they might be for free silver as an abstract idea, they were "again its enforcement" under existing conditions. This was a more hopeful view of the situation than was warranted by known facts. That the House will pass a free coinage bill it would not be safe to predict, for there are many political considerations which may at the critical moment operate to restrain the majority. The probabilities are that whether the measure passes the House or not it will not pass the Senate, and it is nearly certain as anything in politics can be that it will never become a law while President Harrison is in the White House.

Mr. Holman has caused some agitation in the west by his declaration for economy. It is feared that the world's fair will be stunted in a most unseasonable manner, if it is recognized at this time for starting work. It is regretted, not merely by Chicago, but by the whole country. The nations of the world are concerned in the Columbian exposition. When relief for starving Russia was proposed, a stroke in the direction of economy was made that might well answer for some time to come. The expensive extremity of war with Chile is contemplated in politics can be that it will never become a law while President Harrison is in the White House.

If those prisoners at Rio de Janeiro could have handled the guns they captured the world might have been looking rather to that capital than this for starting work. As a matter of fact, the 100 who seized the fort and could not hold them are to be relegated to the same category with Garza's revolutionists or even lower. The Brazilians, it is to be observed, are having an assortment of revolutionary phenomena. The consolation to those who desire stability consistent with some appearance of free government is that the counter revolutionists to the first are all failures, with little bloodshed.

The Philadelphia victory seems to have been the precursor of the general triumph of the Cleveland men in Pennsylvania in the control of the state democratic committee and the filling of the vacancy on the national committee. This, coming after some dampers in other quarters, cheers the friends of the ex-President. To have lost Pennsylvania would have been to lose the center of his position.

Governor Boies declares in substance that he does not see the use of prolonging the existence of prohibition laws which cannot be enforced. His politics might be described as reform with a stick in it.

There is a theory that the mud in the Ohio river keeps it from freezing. When the quantity of mud circulated for campaign purposes is considered the chances for skating in Cincinnati are pretty poor.

People who declared a war message to be on its way from the President to Congress might explain the situation by saying that it was intrusted to a district messenger boy.

The fact that people continue to leave their brick beds at home after he is down would give a rather flattering idea of the general estimate of Foraker's strength.

Washington's birthday is an excellent time for Congress to devote its patriotic sentiments in connection with the world's fair. Chicago's invitation is well timed.

Senator Puffer's determination to speak today shows that he is in no way disposed to shrink when many people consider the principal function of a public man.

Belva Lockwood is now in Chicago. It would be no more than courtesy for her to appoint a board of gentlemen managers for her presidential boom.

The activity of General Garza's movements may be due to an effort to collect a few delinquent subscriptions on his newspaper.

The Chicago government will know more when it gets older, but this country cannot be expected to wait on this development.

One thing is as clear as a sunbeam—the course of this republic toward Chile has been forbearing in a most marked degree.

Mr. Mills is physically on the mend, but he is on the decline so far as the chairmanship of the commerce committee is concerned.

It is interesting to note that the complaints of Ohio river water nearly all seem to come from the Ohio side of the stream.

Mr. Egan can get excellent terms from any enterprising publisher in this country.

Senator Gorham is an esteemed figure in the Washington directory.
